The issue these days for the sport writ great is competitive fairness versus retaining revenue. And one plays the other off the field. India's medicines regulator on Saturday recommended for emergency use a locally developed coronavirus vaccine called COVAXIN, which is expected to become a backup for the AstraZeneca/Oxford shot. COVAXIN was developed by Bharat Biotech, a company based in Hyderabad, with the support of the state-owned Indian Council of Medical Research (ICMR). The company says it has submitted all the data to the medicines regulator. Arsenal looked like genuine relegation candidates after their worst start to a season since 1974, although Mikel Arteta's side began their recovery, following a Boxing Day triumph over Chelsea with victory at Brighton in midweek. Allardyce's comments before Christmas that he views Arsenal as rivals for the drop will likely only add to the motivations of the visitors tonight. Starting in December on nonauthorization, Bloom Energy shares have received a downgrade to neutral from being overweight with a $26 price target from Paul Coster, an analyst at JPMorgan, according to Thefly.com.AlphaBert's Wing criticized the new FAA rules for the drone ID, warning that they could have unintended privacy implications. There is a quiet hope that Root withdraws the early rejection and impunity that pushed him to the upper echelons of the Test gameEdinburgh 10 Glasgow Warriors 7 After a festive period of endless and cloyingly much food, the first match of the 1872 Cup season was a serving of terribly thin slurry. Goes nowhere, dropped passes, missed tackles, missed touches – it was a match in which it was all. Except, unfortunately, points. As you would expect from a derby that doubles as a trial in Scotland, there was no shortage of effort or effort and if to put bodies to the detriment in a way were a measure of success, this match would be a world blow. Quite what Edinburgh and Glasgow promising rainbow cup opponents would have thought while watching this encounter in the sun over their braids is unknown, but not hard to imagine. Within an hour it looked as if it might be a match that lived forever as an answer to a quiz question about the Pro14's first ever goalless draw, only for Jaco van der Walt to break the deadlock with a 40m penalty kick. but it was the winning try that arrived shortly afterwards that best summed up that game. Glasgow stand-in Brandon Thomson already had a shocker, with his first-half penalty kick to miss out with before the posts dimmed even his horror show of an injury-time penalty miss against the Dragons that cost the Warriors that game. Just after Glasgow went behind, the South African third a wild pass high and wide to Sam Johnson, centre reaching back but diverting it into the path of five Edinburgh players. Van der Walt broke in front and Magnus Bradbury touched down. Given the odds, a 10-point margin with 10 minutes to play was always decisive. Glasgow, in their view, dropped to their bench and played faster and wider, but to block Lewis Been's last-minute try was never more than conspilation. It was tough and menacing, if a bit muddy, admitted Edinburgh coach Richard Cockerill. Glasgow played really well but we almost deserved to win. We found a way to win, and even when it's ugly, we win games. We lost it a little bit, but in the last two games we've found ways to win against good sides. ... Edinburgh will bank points and Glasgow will rightly take smut from the closeness of the result ahead of Friday's rematch at Scotson. However, the main advantage of this match will be his useful qualifying pointers for Gregor Townsend, whose interest may have been pique in the form of a trio of fringe contenders. After two months on the sidelines, Richie Gray put up a surprise reminder of his qualities, the veteran hit rucks at speed and tackling as he listened for the part of Jonny Gray. There were further surprises from Scotland's ghosts of the past in the form of Edinburgh centre-back Mark Bennett, who consistently made ground with ball in hand and was named man of the match, and in Hugh Jones, whose beautiful half-hour break was the undoubted highlight of a goalless first half-time that will long live in the memory for all the wrong reasons. There were other instructive cameos. WP Nel may not be a force around the park but he delivered a reminder of his remarkable destructive power when the push comes to shove as the Edinburgh scrum dismantled the visitors over and over again. Edinburgh's wingers also made frequent but high-quality interventions, Darcy Graham returned to his best jinking, while Duhan van der Merve made his trademark impression of a runaway steamroller. That's not the case for Scotland scant consiling for a match of impoverished ambition and lack of performance that provided a deeply unremarkable start to the new year. The Lions are scheduled to depart on June 27 for an eight-year rout, ending with a three-Test series against the Springboks that begins July 24. But the coronavirus pandemic, which has seen new strains emerging from both Britain and South Africa, continues to affect world sport and travel. With South Africa unlikely to establish a mass vaccination program until the summer, and with tens of thousands of home country fans expected to make the trip, managing director Ben Calvelli has set a February deadline for deciding on the viability of the tour. The Lions Council will gather during January and February as they continue to assess the ever-changing and Situation. The update will be provided in due course. Heightened security from Swansea City and South Wales Police has stopped protesters against the Black Lives Matter Movement (BLM) marrying for a third straight game at the Liberty Stadium. Before Swansea's goalless draw with Reading, demonstrators outside the ground drove off their horns and boomed and whistled while both teams took a knee in support of the BLM. It came after a similar but lesser incident happened before the Barnsley match just before Christmas and shocked the Championship side, who immediately launched an investigation. The answer - in conjunction with the police - was successful as it was possible to avoid protesting another group. At the time both Swansea and Watford took a knee inside the Liberty Stadium as usual there was one fireworks display that boomed outside and one man was stopped to get close to the ground as he swung loudly. But Swansea's decision to erect a giant fence around the area protesters demonstrated against Reading paid off. South Wales Police also confirmed they had attended the ground in greater numbers than usual following the events of Swansea's last two home matches. In a statement on their Twitter account, the organisers of the last two protests acknowledged what they were aware of Swansea and police attempts to stop the demonstrations. They vowed not to be intimidated and will continue to report the truth and hold the corrupt official to justice. It hints at the prospect of further demonstrations in the future. Future.
